TEACHING AND ADVISING EXPERIENCE

Munich School of Politics and Public Policy (Course Convener)

- Supervised research projects, MA theses, and research internships on a wide variety of subjects including the comparative organization of development banking, the regulation of digital privacy and the politics of competition law.
- “Competition Law and Policy in Comparative & International Perspective,”
 - Graduate seminar that analyzes the historical development of state market regulation in comparative and historical perspective. In exploring how state institutions have sought to address competition questions across different contexts, students gain a theoretical and empirical understanding of the institutional foundations of market capitalism.
- “States and Markets”
 - Interdisciplinary graduate seminar that critically examines the interaction of politics and economics in Europe and North America over the past century. Topics include the welfare state, market liberalization, inequality, political populism, monopoly capitalism and climate change.
 - Evaluation: 1.1/5.0 (“1” is best) (Winter Semester 2021-2022).

- “Technology Governance and the Regulatory State”
 - This Master’s level course examines the politics of regulating Big Tech with a focus on approaches pursued in the European Union and United States. Substantive topics include consumer protection, labor rights, antitrust, the sharing economy, and social media.
 - Evaluation: 1.0/5.0 (“1” is best) (Summer Semester 2021); 1.3/5.0 (Winter Semester 2021-2022).

Brown University (Course Convener)

- Supervised a collaborative research project that compared policy responses to structural changes in the newspaper industry through Brown’s SPRINT Award undergraduate research program (Summer 2020).
- Neoliberal Capitalism and its Discontents (Spring 2020 and Spring 2021).
 - Designed and led undergraduate seminar that uses a Polanyian framework to critically examine the interaction of politics and economics in Europe and North America over the past century. Topics include Keynesianism, the welfare state, market liberalization, inequality, political populism, financial crises, and climate change.
 - Evaluation: 5.0/5.0 across all categories (“5” is best) (Spring 2020); 4.6/5.0 (Spring 2021).

London School of Economics and Political Science (Lecturer)

- Advised eleven dissertations for graduate students on a range of public policy topics (2018-2019).
- “The Politics of Policy Advice” (Spring 2019).
 - Led a discussion section in a graduate course that critically examines the role of economists, scientists, lawyers, and other experts in the policymaking process, and assesses how various forms of evidence are used to inform and justify policy decisions (Evaluation 4.2/5.0).
- “Law and Politics of Regulation” (Fall 2018 and Spring 2019).
 - Co-taught with faculty from Law, Economics, and Public Administration a Master’s-level seminar that provides interdisciplinary and comparative perspectives on business regulation. Subjects examined include theories of regulation; market-based techniques of regulation; cost-benefit analysis; regulatory competition; and regulatory democracy (Evaluation: 4.7/5.0).
- “Public Management Theory and Doctrine” (Fall 2018).
 - Served as one of two lecturers in a required Master’s-level course that introduces the interdisciplinary field of public management. Topics include public management theory; organizational change; street-level bureaucrats; transparency; bureaucratic learning; and risk and crisis management (Evaluation: 4.8/5.0).

Harvard University (Teaching Fellow)

- “Democracy in Theory and Practice” (Spring 2017).
 - Undergraduate tutorial examining current issues in democratic politics including rights, representation, accountability, and inequality (Evaluation: 5.0/5.0 across all seven categories).
- “Democratic Theory” (Spring 2014 and Spring 2012, Harvard Kennedy School).
 - Masters-level introductory course in democratic theory covering Aristotle, Machiavelli, Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau, Mill, Marx, Schumpeter, Habermas, Foucault, and Rawls.
 - Q-Score: 4.6/5.0 (Spring 2014); 4.6/5.0 (Spring 2012).
- “The Making of Modern Politics: The Development of Democracy in Europe from the Middle Ages to the EU” (Fall 2013).
 - Undergraduate survey focused on the development of democratic institutions in Europe, with a special focus on political developments in Britain, France, Germany, and Italy. (Q-Score: 4.3/5).
